

Talking About Your Job — Five Minute English Podcast

Transcript (B1)

Hi there and welcome to the Five Minute English Podcast. The place where you learn real English for real life in just 5 minutes a day. Here we keep things simple, practical, and easy to follow. You'll hear clear English, useful conversations, and everyday vocabulary that you can actually use.

Today's episode is called Talking About Your Job. We'll listen to Lisa and her old university friend Emily who meet again at a cafe after a long time. They talk about their current jobs, what they do every day, and how they feel about work.

Lisa: Wow, it's so good to see you. I didn't expect to run into you here.

Emily: What a surprise. I was just grabbing a coffee before heading back to the office. How have you been?

Lisa: Pretty good, thanks. Just busy with work. You know how it is. Are you still in marketing?

Emily: Yes, I am. I've been working as a marketing assistant at a tech company for almost 2 years now.

Lisa: Nice. What exactly do you do there?

Emily: Well, I help manage our social media accounts, write content for the website, and support the team during product launches. Sometimes I even work on creating short videos for our campaigns.

Lisa: That sounds creative. Do you like it?

Emily: Most of the time, yes. The team is great and I get to learn new things every day, but it can get stressful, especially when we're close to a deadline or launching a new product.

Lisa: I totally get that. I work in customer service for an online clothing store. I deal with customer emails and help people track their orders or solve delivery problems.

Emily: Wow, that must be intense. Do you do that in the office?

Lisa: Not always. It's a hybrid role, so I work from home 3 days a week and go to the office twice a week. I actually like the flexibility. It saves time and helps with work life balance.

Emily: I wish I had that. I work from the office most days, although we're allowed to work remotely once a week. If I had to go in every day, I'd probably spend half my time stuck in traffic.

Lisa: Exactly. Sometimes I listen to podcasts on the way. Actually, this one called Five Minute English is great.

Emily: No way. I've heard of it, too. Maybe we should start one about our work lives.

Great job listening. Now, let's take a moment to go over some useful words and expressions from the conversation.

One, marketing assistant. This is someone who works with the marketing team. They help with different tasks like writing, posting on social media, or helping with events and promotions.

Two, product launch. When a company is ready to show and sell a new product to the public, that's called a product launch. It's often a big event or campaign.

Three, hybrid role. This kind of job lets you work in two places, partly from home and partly at the office. It gives people more flexibility during the week.

Four, work life balance. This means having a healthy mix between your work and your personal time. When you have good work life balance, you're not too stressed and still have time to relax or be with your family and friends.

Five, deadline. A deadline is the latest time or date when something must be done. When people say they have a deadline, it means they need to finish their work by that time.

Six, customer service. This is a type of job where you help people who have questions or problems with a product or service. It's about making sure customers are happy and supported.

Seven, content. Content is anything you create and share online, like writing, photos, or videos. It's often used for websites, blogs, or social media.

Eight, campaign. A campaign is a set of planned actions to promote or advertise something. It often includes emails, social media posts, videos, and more.

Nine, intense. When something is intense, it feels strong or difficult. A job or day can be intense if there's a lot to do or if it's stressful or fast-paced.

That's it for today's episode of the Five Minute English Podcast. Want more daily English practice? Subscribe for more beginner lessons every week. See you next time. And remember, practice a little every day.